Not guilty of murder

A Bennington woman was found not guilty of murder in connection to the death of one of her nursing home patients back in 2012. Jodi LaClaire, 39, was accused of murdering 83-year-old Nita Lowery by using a fatal dose of insulin, which caused her to slip into a coma and die. In addition to the not guilty verdict, LaClaire was also acquitted of one count of abuse to a vulnerable adult, but was convicted on six counts of financial exploitation of a vulnerable adult after stealing from Lowery's bank account.

$10,000 cash bail

Hillsborough woman remains in jail pending trial

Katlynn Hollinsworth, 24, of Hillsborough is confined to the Hillsborough County jail pending trial on charges of aggravated driving while impaired and first degree assault. Hollinsworth was unable to post the cash bail set at her arraignment. Authorities say she was under the influence of prescription drugs, including Ativan, when her car jumped the curb and hit 3-year-old Cooper Rogers as he and his mother left a Hillsborough day care center last Wednesday.

Cooper remains at Dartmouth-Hitchcock Medical Center where he is being treated for a serious brain injury.

Violette's Supermarket closing in Newport

Newport residents reacted with surprise and sadness to the news that Violette's Supermarket would be closing its doors only a little over a year since its grand opening.

When Violette's held its Grand Opening on a Sunday last August, it marked the return of a family business founded in Newport in the 1930s. It was then that current manager Dana Violette's grandfather opened Woodhall's Market and operated it until 1970. From 1981-1990 Dana's father, Vern, operated as Violette's in Newport before selling to Butson's. With the opening, the Violette's felt they had returned to their roots.

Man jumps out of moving vehicle to avoid arrest

Rather than be stopped by Antrim police, an as yet unidentified man jumped out of the passenger door of his moving car and fled through the woods on Clinton Road.

Officer Brian Lord was on Main Street on October 25th when he spotted a tan, 2000 Dodge Neon Sedan without its lights on heading north. Ignoring Lord's attempt to pull him over he left the car while it was still moving. Police reports indicate the car was still in gear and continued to travel north before going off the road into the swamp on Clinton Road.

Lord then called in Sgt. Nick Hodgen of the Hillsborough Police Department and the K9 team searched for about an hour and a half without success.

The car, which sustained minor damage, was taken to the Peterborough Police Department's impound lot, pending an application for a search warrant. Police Chief Scott Lester says they have a suspect and are working on an arrest warrant, charging the man with DWI, transportation of alcohol, open container, disobeying an officer and resisting arrest.

Stuart Aaronson, Grand Master of Masons in NH (l) and Leigh Bosse, Master of Harmony Lodge in Hillsborough (r) presented Patricia Mathison (c) of Greater Hillsborough Senior Services with the Mason's Community Builders Award.

Hopkinton High's future

During the fall of 2012, Facility Fridays were held to provide tours of all district buildings. Listening Posts, hosted by the Hopkinton School Board, are the next in a series of facility events. Listening Posts provide the opportunity for members of the school board to understand the thoughts, insights, and desires of the community.

The second facility related Listening Post was held last week, where two questions were discussed: 1. Should the Hopkinton School District seek out neighboring communities for inclusion in the District, i.e. look to expand its footprint? 2. What school configuration (K-3, 4-6, 7-12, K-5, 6-12, etc.) best supports the academic, social, and emotional growth of Hopkinton's young people?

Former Bennington man killed in Afghanistan

Staff Sgt. Liam J. Nevins, 32, of Denver, Colo., was killed by enemy insurgents during a military training exercise in Afghanistan on september 21st.

Nevins was assigned to the Colorado Army National Guard's 5th Battalion, 19th Special Forces Group, Watkins, Colo. A former Bennington resident, Nevins attended the Pierce Elementary School and Great Brook School in Antrim. According to an Army press release, during a range training exercise at the Forward Operating Base Shank in the Paktia Province of Afghanistan, enemy forces attacked the training unit with small arms fire, which killed Nevins and two other soldiers.

TAKE YOUR MEDICINE

BY SARAH CHAPIN

Patients with pneumonia may spend fewer days in the hospital if they are given steroids along with antibiotics and supportive care. That's the finding of a Mayo Clinic analysis of eight randomized-controlled clinical trials involving more than 1,100 patients. The results appear in the Journal of Hospital Medicine.

A new study published in Cancer, a peer-reviewed journal of the American Cancer Society, has found that women who take aspirin have a reduced risk of developing melanoma — and that the longer they take it, the lower the risk. The findings suggest that aspirin's anti-inflammatory effects may help protect against this type of skin cancer.

People who take the newest class of diabetes drugs to control blood sugar are twice as likely as those on other forms of sugar-control medication to be hospitalized with pancreatitis. In an article published online in JAMA Internal Medicine, Johns Hopkins researchers say the new drugs — glucagon-like peptide-1-based therapies (GLP-1) — are associated with an increased risk of hospitalization for acute pancreatitis. The agents sitagliptin and exenatide — generic names for the drugs sold under the brand names Januvia and Byetta — appear to contribute to the formation of lesions in the pancreas and the proliferation of ducts in the organ, resulting in wellsprings of inflammation. Patients should be alert to symptoms of pancreatitis — nausea, vomitting that won't stop, abdominal pain — and seek treatment immediately if any symptoms noted on the drug label occur. Pancreatitis can be dangerous if left untreated.

Janet Zeller, national accessibility program manager with the U.S. Forest Service, and conference attendee Stephen Legge of The Groton Trails Committee in Groton, Mass., measure the slope of the trail at several different angles.

Crotched hosts Sustainable Trails meeting

Crotched Mountain Foundation recently hosted a "Sustainable Trails for All" Conference to provide participants information and guidelines to creating accessible trails in their own communities. As home to the longest accessible trail system in a mountainside environment in the country, Crotched Mountain has received national recognition on its accessible trails. Instructors at the conference were Janet Zeller, national accessibility program manager with the U.S. Forest Service, and Peter Jensen, master planner/builder and member of the Professional Trail Builders Association."Crotched Mountain's trail system is absolutely unique," said Zeller. "It has more than two miles of trails in a mountainous setting that offer a range of terrain as well as comply with accessibility guidelines. We are delighted to present this conference and help others achieve the same success." The opening of the trails in June of 2011 completed the first phase of an Outdoor Recreation Master Plan developed by Crotched Mountain in 2006.

A missing man's body was found earlier this week at Mount Sunapee, Newbury police said. According to officials, the body belongs to a man who had been missing from Warner. Fish and Game officers were in charge of search and recovery efforts, but they have not disclosed the man's identity or cause of death. More information is expected to be available later, police said.

Warner fall Foliage Festival features 1 mile Children's Fun Run

On Columbus Day Weekend, runners scampered from the start of the first Children's 1-Mile Fun Run at the Warner Fall Foliage Festival last year. About 80 boys and girls of all ages ran down the main street of Warner, up a hill and down the other side, passing hundreds of onlookers and dozens of colorful trees along the way. The children sported bright orange t-shirts and on their faces, looks of determination.

"The Fun Run was definitely one of the most photogenic events of last year's festival," said Michelle Allen, chair of the Kids Corner Committee. "Everyone stopped to watch and cheer the kids running down the home stretch. It was like a big orange streak. Even the kids who finished the race early stayed and cheered for the last ones. It was pretty spectacular. The whole community came out to support these kids."

The number participating this year is expected to be even higher. Those interested in running should fill out the registration form on the festival website: www.wfff.org. "The race starts at 9:30 on Sunday [October 13], and after everyone has crossed the finish line, the kids will be treated to a bubble party and refreshments in the park," Allen said.

The Jim Mitchell Community Park will be celebrating its grand welcoming from October 11-13. The park is adjacent to and behind the Main Street Bookends book store that Jim Mitchell operated with his sister.

"We thank the Warner Fall Foliage Festival for providing us with a matching grant to help kick this project off. Five years later, we're able to share it with the community," said Katharine Nevins, Mitchell's sister.

"This is a big example of what the festival can do for this town, and we're so honored to present this back to the community."

The park, with its huge slate patio, magnificent stone wall and open amphitheater will accommodate many events during the festival. Several bands will perform on the new post and beam stage that still smells of fresh stain.

"I speak on behalf of MainStreet Warner, Inc. This would never have happened without a matching grant from the festival. Never," Nevins said.

The Warner Fall Foliage Festival will be held October 11-13, and admission is free. More information can be found on the festival website www.wfff.org.

"We hope families from all around will come and join the fun," said Festival president, Sean Bohman.

Selectmen review 1941 inspection report

The New London Selectmen have received the inspection report on the 1941 building. Peter Bianchi noted that he has not reviewed the report in detail yet, but noticed that there are two statements in the report that he questioned: (1) the Town's public/private partnership with the group that commissioned the report, and (2) the fact that the Recreation Director would be serving as a coordinator for the building. He noted that these two issues have not yet been decided by the Board so he felt that inclusion in the report was premature.

Savings from the STEM project could save the district over $350,000. Acting Police Chief Ed Anderson (l) and Dispatch Chief Heather Wood briefed the New London Selectmen on the availability of a potential Homeland Security Grant.

New London Dispatch Center seeks grant

Acting Police Chief Ed Anderson and Dispatch Administrator Heather Wood briefed the New London Selectmen on their efforts to improve its emergency dispatch services. New London currently dispatches for 9 towns with 19 police, fire and EMS agencies and communications are difficult in outlying areas.

In phase I, Wood has applied for a Homeland Security grant to cover 50% of the $75,000 cost to place a repeater on the King Ridge tower in Sutton to carry fire frequencies. Phase II for $19,000 would include providing police frequencies and could be covered by a 100% grant.

Hillsboro Lions Club "Senior Citizen's Dinner" November 16th

The tradition continues for the 37th consecutive year as the Hillsboro Lions Club prepares to host its Annual Free Senior Dinner. Begun in 1976 by the Hillsboro Area Jaycees, the local Lions took over the project when the Jaycees disbanded. This year's dinner is scheduled for November 16th at the Hillsboro-Deering Elementary School cafeteria.

A free full course turkey dinner will be served at 1:00 p.m. Two years ago those attending consumed nine 20 lb turkeys, 36 lbs of green beans, 71 lbs of squash, 30 lbs of onions, and 16 dozen dinner rolls, not to mention the stuffing, gravy, pickles, olives, cranberry sauce and pies.

The Lions managed to serve just over 200 meals and no one went away hungry, but the extra large attendance did stretch the food supply and prevented the Lions from providing take home meals for those unable to attend. Last year the Club had increased the shopping list to rectify the situation and will again have ample food for all.

The Deering Fish & Game Club sponsored a "Women On Target Program"

Twenty join Women On Target Program

On Saturday, September 21, twenty women from about 16 years of age to "I'll Never Tell" completed a course called "Women On Target" at the Deering Fish and Game Club in West Deering. The course consists of safety training and demonstrations, how to handle, aim and fire a handgun, proper sight picture in order to hit a target, care and cleaning of handguns and finally shooting 30 or more rounds on the firing line. Many of the participants had never handled a handgun before and were pleasantly surprised how simple it really is when coached by competent people. Chairman of the affair was Bob Thomas with Don and Marilyn Jost as chief instructors and Marilyn as master range officer. The Josts are both nationally certified handgun instructors so everything is done in a very safe and purposeful manner. The Deering Fish and Game Club thanks all of the other coaches, demonstrators and helpers that combined to make an informative an enjoyable time.

Teacher's union questions resignation

Representatives of the Newport Teacher's Union recently questioned the School Board over the recent resignation of Tea Christine Downing, the Coordinator of Educational Improvement at Newport High School. Board Chair Leo Paquins stated that Downing was a beacon, and someone teachers could look to when principals and superintendents were leaving. He said he believed she was leaving to take a promotion, but when asked about her resignation Downing said she would rather talk about it in a non public session. Downing later read a letter of resignation and the board accepted it with deep regrets.

Construction to begin on Sunapee's new Abbott Library

The Sunapee Selectmen scheduled a special 8:00AM meeting at the Town Office on Friday to sign the Abbott Library Building Permit and the Library's Construction Manager's Contract.

The Abbott Library Foundation has completed a two year fundraising campaign having reached their goal of $1,325,000. These publicly donated funds, together with a $975,000 town loan that voters approved in March and previously contributed funds, will provide the $2,700,000 needed for the new 7,200 square foot library building.

Land for the new building, purchased last year, is located on Route 11 and Sargent Road. Site work will start in mid-October on the 2.8 acre lot located between Sunapee Center and the Town Garage: The architect is Tennant/Wallace of Manchester and the Construction Manager is Trumbull-Nelson of Lebanon. The building is expected to be completed in summer 2014.

The Community Alliance's third annual Reach the Peak Adventure Challenge drew 141 adults in the 5k and 50 kids raced the one-mile abbreviated course. Although final figures are not yet in, they estimate $8,000 was raised. Meanwhile in Sutton, nearly 200 participants took part in the 2013 Strut in Sutton 5K, held at the Sutton Athletic Field, in support of the Sutton Central School PTO.

Gil Shattuck, Curator of the Manahan-Phelps-McCulloch Photographic Collection, gave a program on the accomplishment over the last 10 years of digitalizing and conserving 145,000 negatives dating back to the 1860's Monday night at the Franklin Pierce Homestead. This collection encompass the entire time line of negative photography. No other photographic collection in NH is comparable. Courtesy photo.

YES VIRGINIA, REPUBLICANS CAN BE WRONG TOO

As a proud Republican, dating back to the days of Barry Goldwater, I am increasingly embarrassed by the antics of those who profess to be pure conservatives with a clear, if narrow, vision of how the party should act. Recently the rantings of Texas Senator Ted Cruz, like those of former NH Speaker Bill O'Brien, have achieved exactly to opposite of their intended results. Cruz and O'Brien's posturing gives a face to and lends credibility to the Democrat's stereotypes of all Republicans as grumpy old men, who oppose everything and can only say no.

Cruz's ill-fated attempt to link delaying ObamaCare with razing the debt limit makes him and the Republican Party look like obstructionists and plays right into the President's hands. If successful, and he never will be, Cruz's action would only delay the collapse of ObamaCare beyond the 2014 elections, giving Democrats an edge.

The problem with the President's "Affordable Care Act" is that it is simply unaffordable. It is crumbling before our eyes, even as the President attempts to delay its most onerous provisions.

Attention Senator Cruz, let the act go into effect. Let the American people experience it's increased cost, lack of choice and federal mandates. If the public still likes it, we will have all been wrong in opposing it. I doubt it though. More likely its collapse will trigger another Republican landslide in 2014.

FINDING COMMON GROUND ON EDUCATION

It's time to sharpen those #2 pencils. Students across New Hampshire sit down for the annual standardized tests starting October 1st, and the results are meant to show parents and teachers alike how well we're educating our children. We're not going to like the results.

The New England Common Assessment Program (NECAP) tests 3rd through 8th and 11th graders each October in reading and mathematics, 5th, 8th, and 11th graders every fall in writing, and 4th, 8th, and 11th graders each May in science. The results are used to determine which schools and school districts have met the increasingly tough standards of the No Child Left Behind Act, which has the impossible goal of 100% proficiency in all grades and subjects by 2014. We're not going to make it.

In 2012, 71% of schools and 66% of school districts failed to make Adequate Yearly Progress (AYP) towards the NCLB goals. The State Department of Education didn't publish how many failed to meet those benchmarks this year, but the results of each school's tests are available on the Department's web site. According to the state DOE database, 324 schools are now designated "Schools in Need of Improvement" (SINI), having failed to make AYP in the same category two years in a row. This year, five schools tested themselves off the list, having made the grade for two years in a row.

But these results don't tell us very much about how well our schools are doing. They supposedly measure the Headlines we didn't write, but others did...

"Police arrest everyone on February 22nd"

percentage of students proficient in each subject and grade, but that all depends on what knowledge and skills you test.

We can draw some broad comparisons between schools. My alma mater, Hillsboro-Deering High School, does well in reading, with 82% of last year's 11th graders scoring Proficient or higher, compared to 81% at Concord High, and 77% statewide. But the math numbers were atrocious. Just 23% of Hillcats were Proficient in math, compared to 43% in Concord and 37% statewide. The high school math numbers would be depressing, but apparently few of us would know enough to understand them.

Whether these scores are good or bad is of little consequence, since teachers, administrators, and school board members are not held accountable for them. State and local officials complain that the AYP goals are unrealistic, and perhaps they are. And parents can't be blamed for not understanding why their child now attends a SINI for failing to make AYP on the NECAP.

Every school has room for improvement, and it's counterproductive to label anything short of 100% proficiency a failure. But that doesn't mean we should abandon any hope of holding our schools to high standards.

This week, 250 parents and educators got together in Manchester for a forum on Common Core Standards organized by Cornerstone Policy Research. Opponents of Common Core see it as an attempt to circumvent federal laws that prohibit the Department of Education from controlling elementary and secondary school curriculum. Technically, it's not a curriculum, but a set of recommended academic standards, grade by grade, subject by subject.

In practice, it's a national curriculum. It spells what skills should be taught each year, and which books should be read. The Obama Administration has used carrots and sticks to pressure states into adopting Common Core, and 45 states including New Hampshire have done so. The bar against which students will be tested is set by Common Core, whether or not a local school district adopts its recommendations. The Manchester School Board is debating whether to sign up.

It would be irresponsible for any school board to cut and paste its curriculum from a federal template. Opponents have objected to some sexually explicit books on the recommended reading list. Others dislike the exclusion of classic works like Dickens and Twain in favor of more modern authors.

The Pioneer Institute, which spearheaded education reforms in Massachusetts over the past two decades, thinks Common Core is watering down the high standards it helped raise in the Bay State. Local school boards could very well adopt Common Core's focus on a non-fiction reading, critical analysis, and in-depth math instruction while cutting out other parts of the program, or adding to the local reading list.

One objection I've already rejected is teaching to the test. My mother served on the Hillsboro School Board for six years, and she always said teaching to the test was exactly what teachers should be doing, as long as we're testing for the right things. And that's the most important function of local school boards.

Our schools aren't good enough. A high school diploma carries less weight than ever in the job market, because it no longer signals the basic writing and math skills that employers need. We should demand higher standards.

The federal push for Common Core is improper. Race To The Top education grants and NCLB waivers should not be tied to local and state adoption of the program. But if school boards decide absent coercion to adopt and adapt those standards to their local schools, parents will at least know what their kids are supposed to learn.

For decades, we debated education funding as if they're the same thing as educational quality. We have made small steps through charters and tax credit scholarships to introduce competition. We also need to start demanding accountability. We can't have accountability without standards. Those opposing Common Core should seize the opportunity to promote higher ones.

Sunapee High's "Student of the Month"

Sunapee Middle High School is pleased to recognize Senior Emily Whittier as the high school Student of the Month for September, 2013. Emily has become the responsible, mature adult that we hope all our students will aspire to be. She has been supportive of both her peers and instructors, provoking thoughtful discussion and incorporating outside experiences into the class dialogue. She maintains a cordial and pleasant demeanor that is others-oriented, as she was also the first to welcome a new student to the school and ask if there was anything she could help him with; making him feel very welcome. In addition to all these characteristics, Emily remains a top student and an active part of the co-curricular programs at SMHS.

Stark students study at Institute of Art

Over forty John Stark visual arts students participated in field work at the Andres Institute of Art in Brookline, NH in late September. Students had a rare opportunity to meet and observe the stone carving process of four sculptors from around the globe who are part of the 15th Annual International Sculpture Symposium, "Introspection," at Andres this year. This is the third year Robblee's 3D and Sculpture students have traveled to the Andres Institute of Art. Robblee uses the trip to demonstrate to the students the attributes and characteristics of large-scale, public sculpture.

"It's an art field work experience like no other, Andres is the hidden gem of New Hampshire," said John Stark Art Educator Bess Robblee of the trip. "There is no other place in the state that has over seventy-two sculptures and one hundred-forty acres to explore. Many of my students think of art as existing only in a traditional museum such as the MFA in Boston. Now these students see that art can be a part of nature, art can be touched, and art can be outside the walls of a building," continued Robblee.

On the glorious, sunny fall day of the trip, students were able to meet and talk with four international artists: Helgi Gislason from Iceland, Florin Strejac from Romania, Jocelyn Pratt from New Zealand, and Greg Spitzer from the US. All of these artists were carving large granite sculptures.

In addition to sculpture classes, John Stark photography students on the trip also conducted research with Art Teacher Tracy Travers. The photography students were able to take photographs of sculptures in the sculpture park and learn about nature photography. They also experienced taking action images as they captured sculptors at work on their pieces.

To make the trip a broader experience for the students the trip included a John Stark Physical Education teacher. "It now ties, art, photography, and physical education all together," said Robblee.

Antrim & ConVal officials discuss gym

The Antrim Selectmen had a brief meeting on Monday night. Administrator Galen Stearns announced that through the efforts of Dianne Chauncy, the town has been approved for a $13,073 grant from FEMA to cover the damage from the winter storm on February 8th.

Stearns and John Robinson reported on the meeting with ConVal representatives regarding the use of the town gym. The Board decided to appoint a three person team consisting of one selectman and two representatives of Antrim Recreation to meet with the school to resolve the issue. It was stressed that fixing the gym floor should be a priority.

Andover Historical Society touring a pair of landmarks

Two little-known and seldom-seen Andover landmarks – the burial ground of first settler Joseph Fellows (1727-1811), and a nearby monument commemorating his role in the town's settlement – may be visited by local residents on Sunday, October 13, between 1:00 and 3:00 p.m. At that time visitors will be guided to the landmarks' locations by members of the Andover Historical Society and offered a short presentation. Sturdy shoes are recommended. The event, sponsored by the Historical Society, is free and open to the public. No advance registration is necessary. The landmarks are on property currently owned by Ron and Pam Cooper, at 363 Chase Hill Road in East Andover. Their home, known locally as the Emery Homestead and built in 1775, is hidden from the road at the end of a long driveway.

At the southern end of the Coopers' property, an eighth of a mile or so from the house, sits the Fellows memorial, a granite marker surrounded by iron railing. Erected by the town in 1912, it reads: "On this spot in 1761 Joseph Fellows, pioneer and soldier, built the first house in Andover." The reverse side reads: Here Joseph and Margaret (Webster) Fellows founded the first home in Andover."

Behind the house and barn, about an eighth of a mile north, is the picturesque burial ground of Fellows, his wife, their son-in-law, and the son-in-law's eight infant children. The single gravestone is surrounded by old stone walls and huge pine trees. Residents who would like to view the landmarks but are unable to attend the October 13 event may contact the Coopers to schedule a visit at another time. Pam Cooper can be reached by e-mail at pamc102@aol.com, or by telephone at 671.8007.

Chase Hill Road joins State Route 11 at the Andover Congregational Church in East Andover. After about three miles, turn left into the driveway marked "363."

Discover the Secrets of Free Masonry

Freemasonry is a charitable, benevolent, educational and religious society.
Its only secrets are in its method of recognition and of symbolic instruction.

- It is charitable in that it is not organized for profit, and none of its income benefits any individual.
- It is benevolent in that it teaches and exemplifies altruism as a duty.
- It is educational in that it teaches by ceremonials a system of morality and brotherhood.
- It is religious in that it teaches Monotheism, the Volume of the Sacred Law is open upon its altars whenever a Lodge is in session, addressed lessons of morality; yet it is not sectarian or theological.
- It is a social organization only so far as men may gather in numbers, providing for its work of education, worship, and charity.

Through the improvement and strengthening of the character of the individual man,
Freemasonry seeks to improve the community.

Center Woods Elementary holds all-school assembly

Center Woods Elementary School held their first all school assembly Thursday bringing every teacher, staff member, and student together to celebrate the new year and Center Woods Elementary. The program opened with each grade or group of staff members, dressed in their particular color of the rainbow, presenting who they were and what they do in rhyme Dr. Seuss-style.

"Today you heard all of our staff introduce themselves in a fun, funny way, followed by all of us singing the song "Rainbow Connection," said Principal Jess Potter during the assembly. "You see, we all have different grade levels and different jobs, but we are all connected like the colors of the rainbow," said Potter. Then, as she gestured to all of the students sitting in front of her, "You might ask, where is the pot of gold? Well, it's all of you," she exclaimed to loud applause and cheers.

Stark upgrades college placement/career planning

John Stark Regional High School has added a new tool in the Counseling Office to assist students in their college and career planning. This fall the JSRHS introduced Naviance, a web-based program that offers comprehensive college and career planning solutions to help streamline the college search and application process and connects academic achievement to post-secondary goals. Naviance will allow Counseling Center staff to have more face time with students because it also offers a streamlined system for submitting college applications, transcripts, and letters of recommendation for seniors in their college application process. "A big part of our job, of course, is assisting seniors applying to college. But, a huge part of that has been manual, making sure letters of recommendation, transcripts, etc. get to all of the places a student is applying," said JSHRS Counseling Center Director Mark Bograd. "One of the aspects of Naviance is that it automates and streamlines that task, freeing us up to work with students in other ways," he continued. Naviance is a great tool for students to use, too. Juniors can use it to conduct college searches and in a student's sophomore and freshman years, Naviance can be used for looking at career interests, personality traits in relation to careers, etc.
