Henniker Community School sixth graders study Japan

Henniker sixth graders' expanded classroom study of Japan began in February when teaching artist Shana Brautigam of Rooted in Clay in Rindge, NH, worked with the students to create hand-built, pinched clay tea bowls and caddies. Students also worked together to create some larger hand-built raku vessels that were fired in an outdoor kiln here at school.

This week, 6th graders have worked with visiting artists Stuart Paton and Motoko. Stuart Paton, Founder and Artistic Director of Burlington Taiko spent most of his childhood in Japan. His formal study of taiko began in 1984 during a summer apprenticeship with Grandmaster Seiichi Tanaka. He founded the Burlington Taiko Group in 1986. Paton and Burlington Taiko conduct 50-75 school performances and residencies annually, providing students with first-hand knowledge of the excitement and power of playing taiko. He now lives in Vermont.

Motoko, a native of Osaka, Japan, first came to the U.S. as an exchange student at the University of Massachusetts. Her earlier career included working as a Japanese language instructor at UMass for ten years. This week, 6th graders have worked with visiting artists Stuart Paton and Motoko. While many high school students spent March 16-19 hitting the slopes, putting in extra hours at work, or just sleeping late, members of the John Stark Stage Company spent their vacation rehearsing and performing their spring musical Once on This Island.

Stark students help 6th graders understand bias

Peer Trainers from John Stark Regional High School's Anti-Defamation League (ADL) Advisory recently traveled to the Henniker Community School to visit with 6th graders and have them participate in activities and conversations to help them discuss bias-related issues like bullying in their school. Imagine a World Without Hate, the slogan used by the Anti-Defamation League, was echoed throughout the presentation at the Henniker Community School.

When they were asked what they should do if they witness an unkind act, the John Stark students offered advice to the 6th graders with suggestions like: 'be the better person' and 'stop it at a single insult.' The John Stark students also offered the following advice—you don't have to be friends with everyone, you don't even have to LIKE everyone, BUT just try to be as nice to as many people as you can. It makes school a lot better for everyone.

"It's a much stronger message when a student takes the initiative to speak to another student about why what they are saying or doing is unacceptable," said John Stark's Gabrielle Anderson, one of three ADL advisors. "A message from a peer carries a lot more weight. The students have been empowered to see that they—the students, not just teachers— can have a positive impact on the climate of their school and they are taking that task on more and more each day. It's their school and they are owning it," continued Anderson.

"Our behavior intervention team reviews behavior and social interaction data weekly, and then targets specific skills to teach at different grade levels using our guidance team and classroom teacher," said Henniker Assistant Principal Karen Raymond. "When we learned about the student ADL group at John Stark and what they could offer our students, we matched a need with what the ADL group could offer. Who better to deliver the message of treating others kindly at the middle school than high school students," concluded Raymond.

At the end of the one hour program, 6th graders asked the John Stark students why they had joined the ADL advisory, John Stark student Terry Zervos explained, "I wanted to be part of something bigger. I hadn't been bullied, but saw bullying happen and I didn't like seeing people excluded or people being mean to others."

There are presently more than 45 freshmen, sophomores, juniors, and seniors at John Stark who have been trained in A WORLD OF DIFFERENCE® Institute's Peer Training Program, a program designed to facilitate and maintain positive social changes in schools sponsored by the Anti-Defamation League (ADL). Just last week, the latest group of John Stark Peer Trainers received two full days of training for the program. John Stark students who presented at the Henniker Community School were: Chris Arris, John Brown, Aliyah Browne, Jacob Goldsberry, Kamini Jorgenson, Jilli Kilar, Mackenzie Lover, Curtis Marden, Joe Muzzy, Jessie Osgood, and Terry Zervos.

Nine students from Hillsboro-Deering's FBLA Chapter have qualified to attend the National Leadership Conference.

H-D Future Business Leaders qualify for Nationals

Hillsboro-Deering's local Future Business Leaders of America (FBLA) chapter attended the 42nd Annual State Leadership Conference (SLC) in Manchester this past March 13th and 14th.

Hillsboro had fifteen high school and five middle school students along with two advisors attend the conference over the two days. While there the students went to various workshops, took competency tests, and role played against other students from around the state.

Hillsboro is the first middle school chapter in NH to attend and compete at the SLC, the middle school students had to achieve a minimal score to be recognized and place at the state level.

The top three in each category qualify to compete at the National Leadership Conference (NLC). Hillsboro had nine of the twenty qualify for this year's NLC, and all are eligible to attend the NLC for the Institute for Leadership workshops. The Hillsboro's chapter also had another State Officer elected to represent NH FBLA next year. Each year students who are interested in State Office campaign, give a speech, participate in a question and answer session, and work their campaign booth at the conference. For the 3rd year in a row a Hillsboro student was one of the six elected in NH.

Adriana Collemacine: State Officer, one of six elected in the state for the 2014-2015 school year

Kaysyn Walker: 1st place in middle school Community Service Project

Cheyenne Elliott and Amelia Gamache: 1st place in middle school Web Page Design

Josh Marshall and Kyle Bergstresser: tied for 2nd place in middle school Career Exploration

Seth Johnson: 3rd place in Business Communications

Emma Vezie: 3rd place in Job Interview

Daniella Shedenhelm and Hillary Madore: 3rd place in Emerging Business Issues (team event)

This year's NLC well be held in Nashville, TN from June 26th through July 2nd. While in Nashville students will be competing against students from around the country in their respective events and also attend team building workshops and conferences. Students will also have the opportunity to learn more about the history and the culture in the Nashville area, go site seeing and see a concert at the Grand Ole Opry.

The chapter will be planning fundraisers to help offset the cost to attend this year's conference. If you like to help support Hillsboro's FBLA or would like more information about our local FBLA chapter contact Joe Walker at jwalker@hdsd.k12.nh.us or call 464-1230.
