Deering In Turmoil

Town Administrator Julius Peel resigns amid pressure

As we go to press, the Deering Select Board is holding what promises to be a protracted and emotional hearing. Although not currently on the agenda, a large crowd is expected to attend in hopes of convincing Town Administra-

Elected in March as an unconventional candidate, Smith indicated she wanted

Colby-Sawyer College to cut tuition from $46,000 to $17,500

New London's Colby-Sawyer College will cut tuition to $17,500 per year starting in the fall of 2023, slashing the sticker price from more than $46,000, with an eye toward competing with New Hampshire's public colleges.

Colby-Sawyer President Sue Stuebner said 100% of Colby-Sawyer students get financial aid of some kind, and almost no one pays the sticker price. But not everyone knows that, she said, and too many prospective students stop looking at Colby-Sawyer after they see that high sticker price.

A recent study from federal student loan servicer Sallie Mae found more than four out of five families will dismiss a college based on the price of attendance, without any other research.

"We realized we're not even getting to have those conversations with families," Stuebner said about the school's generous financial aid. "A big part of this is reaching a wider applicant pool than we've been able to in the past."

Growing the pool of prospective students is getting more and more important for colleges in New England because of the region's demographics. There are fewer students in high school than recent decades, and colleges are in fierce competition for those that remain.

Colby-Sawyer hasn't been immune, Stuebner said. The college counts only 750 undergraduates, though a growing number of graduate and professional programs are helping keep enrollment steadier.

For smaller colleges, shrinking college enrollment and less tuition coming in can make it harder to invest in the campus and faculty, or even lead to financial instability.

Stuebner said a group of the college trustees have been meeting since the beginning of the year to talk about the future of the small college against these headwinds.

The high-tuition, highaid model is typical for liberal arts colleges, but Stuebner said she and the trustees quickly started to ask if that was the future for Colby-Sawyer, with that competition for students, and growing alarm about the cost of a degree.

The college brought in a consultant who has helped colleges in Pennsylvania, the Midwest and the Southeast to figure out where to set a lower tuition rate.

The college settled on $17,500 largely because it's what most students actually end up paying for tuition. Room and board at Colby-Sawyer adds another $16,000 to the cost of attendance.

STUDY SHOWS PARENT PRAISE MIGHT ENCOURAGE CHILDREN'S PERSISTENCE

To become healthy and successful adults, children need to persist on tasks that they might not necessarily consider easy or fun, like studying, exercising, or brushing one's teeth. Throughout childhood, persistence behavior changes daily, but the factors that shape this variability in persistence are understudied. A new study analyzed daily toothbrushing behaviors in three-year-olds and examined the relationship between their persistence on the task and parental praise.

The study included eighty-one three-year-olds learning to brush their own teeth.

Parents submitted videos of nightly toothbrushing over 16 days, capturing both children's persistence and parent talk. Parents were asked to let their child brush their teeth by themselves for as long as they could before the parent stepped in to help. The videos also included parents talking to their child throughout the toothbrushing and "praise" used by parents throughout the nightly ritual. Praise was broken into categories including "process praise" (e.g., "good job"), "person praise" (e.g., "good girl"), and "other praise" (e.g., "very good" or "nice"). Other utterances from parents included "distraction" (e.g., singing, reading a book, invoking pretend play), and using expressions such as "brush the backs" and "keep brushing" as instruction.

The findings showed that children's persistence fluctuates from day to day and is related to parent talk. Children brushed longer on days when their parents used more praise and less instruction. Parent praise during toothbrushing mostly consisted of generic praise and process (e.g., "nice" and "great job"), with few instances of person praise (e.g., "good girl"). Children varied in their sensitivity to mood, sleep, and parent stress.

TAKE YOUR MEDICINE

There may be good news for the nearly 1 million people battling ulcerative colitis, a type of inflammatory bowel condition with no real cure: statins, drugs commonly prescribed to lower cholesterol, seem to be an effective, if unexpected, treatment for the condition, according to a recent study published in the Journal of the American Medical Informatics Association. Currently, the only lines of defense against ulcerative colitis are anti- inflammatory drugs, which don't always work, and a colectomy, the surgical removal of part or all of the colon. Ulcerative colitis causes inflammation and ulcers in the bowel, leaving patients vulnerable to an array of unpleasant symptoms, including abdominal pain, blood in the stool, constipation and fatigue. The condition, while not life threatening, can be severely debilitating, especially if anti-inflammatory medications don't work.

Hypertension is one of the major modifiable risk factors for other debilitating and deadly diseases including heart disease, stroke, kidney failure, and Alzheimer's disease. It is also very common; the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention estimates that about half of Americans over the age of 20 have hypertension — defined as systolic blood pressure above 130 mm Hg or diastolic blood pressure above 80 mm Hg—or have been prescribed antihypertensive drugs. Prior research suggests that the predisposition to hypertension can start early in life, even in the womb, and that protection from that predisposition also can start early. Children who were exposed to higher levels of trace minerals manganese and selenium during their mothers' pregnancy had a lower risk of high blood pressure in childhood, according to a recent study. The results appear in Environmental Health Perspectives.

Multiple Police and EMT units respond to Hopkinton rollover

Hopkinton and Concord EMTs and firefighters as well as Hopkinton, Concord, and New Hampshire State Police were sent to a rollover with entrapment on Broad Cove Road in Hopkinton on Wednesday.

Around 5 p.m., capital region dispatch received a report about a crash and requested Hopkinton EMTs to the scene. A second re-tone was issued also requesting firefighters, since EMTs in town were on another call.

Police dispatch in Concord heard the call and began trying to find out where exactly the accident was located and whether police in the city should assist. Later, a Concord officer was sent to block westbound traffic from the road.

At just before 5:30 p.m., Concord firefighters and EMTs were also sent to assist.

When Hopkinton firefighters arrived, they reported the driver was out of the Hyundai SUV and was examined by firefighters. Concord EMTs took the

The cause of the crash is unknown, but marks on the dirt road appear to

Holiday Scam alerts

With the holiday season approaching, and a noticeable increase in scams reported to us, we wanted to take a moment to remind everyone of ways to remain vigilant against them. Below are four telltale signs that "it's a scam" according to the Federal Trade Commission:

- Scammers PRETEND to be from an organization you know.
- 2. Scammers say there's a PROBLEM or a PRIZE.
- 3. Scammers PRESSURE you to act immediately.
- 4. Scammers tell you to PAY in a specific way.
- A good rule of thumb is if it seems suspicious, it probably is. If it looks too good to be true, it probably is.

Here are some ways you can try to avoid a scam:

- 1. Block unwanted calls & text messages.
- 2. Don't give your personal or financial information in response to a request you didn't expect.
- 3. Resist the pressure to act immediately.
- 4. Know how scammers tell you to pay.
- 5. Stop and talk to someone you trust.

Public input will be critical to consider this important issue so please plan to participate in the coming months!

Colby-Sawyer & SNHU Lead The Way

President Biden's Student Loan payoff is nothing more than an attempt to buy votes in the 2024 election.

This three trillion pork barrel scheme will add to our national debt, increase inflation and is a message that personal responsibility is no longer valued.

There is no doubt that education costs are out of control, but this payoff will do nothing to address the problem.

Education costs have skyrocketed for two reasons:

1. The benefit of a college education has been exaggerated for generations. When I was growing up the mantra was that everyone needed a college education to succeed.

Graduating from UNH with a BA in Political Science, I was qualified for nothing.

If I had not been in the Air Force ROTC, I have no idea what I would have done.

Things are beginning to change as more and more people realize that Trade Schools and on-line learning are alternatives. Not only is tuition lower, but you graduate without high debt and are qualified for a good job.

2. Supported by millions of dollars of available scholarships and grants, colleges and universities are under no pressure to hold down costs. Stories of UNH's $16,000 conference table and senior professors being paid over $200,000 to teach one class per week are all too prevalent.

In contrast Southern New Hampshire University and Colby-Sawyer College are setting an example for all academia to follow.

SNHU has cut $10,000 from tuition for students living on campus but receiving most of their classes remotely.

Colby-Sawyer has cut its tuition from $46,000 to $17,500. (Story on page 2).

Congratulations to these two fine institutions. Let's hope they start a trend.

United We Stand

Abraham Lincoln joined that phrase referring to the North/South split during the Civil War, but it applies equally to electoral politics today.

Democrats have demonstrated an ability to put aside their differences after a primary and unite behind the winner for the General Election.

Republicans lately, are more known for holding grudges and refusing to back their nominee, giving the Democrat candidate a clear path to election.

Attention fellow Republicans, it's time to grow up, swallow our pride and support our nominees.

Messenger readers know that we supported Chuck Morse for US Senate and George Hansel for Congress. Neither man won. I am both frustrated and disappointed, and concerns about General Bolduc and Bob Burns remain.

Nevertheless, I am convinced that these men are better for America than Maggie Hassan and Annie Kuster.

We are in danger of losing the America we love. Hold your breath, bite your tongue if necessary, but get to the polls in November and cast your vote to restore unity and sanity to America.

I'VE SAVED FOR A LIFETIME, AND NOW I COULD LOSE IT ALL?

- -What if I lose my house and life savings to a nursing-home stay?
- -What if after my death, mv adult child divorces or dies? Will my estate transfer to their spouse? What about my grandchildren?
- -What if my adult child is battling creditors or addiction and inherits the estate?

Don't miss this powerful educational session with critical guidance on grandchildren's trusts for education; trusts for children with special needs; and how the SECURE Act affects your ability to create a multi-generational legacy.
