H-D skips teacher math training 300 teachers from 34 districts attend - but none from H-D

More than 300 educators within 34 school districts throughout the state completed hands-on mathematics training, which is designed to build teacher assessment literacy and a stronger background in mathematics learning progressions and formative assessment practices. "This interactive training has become an important tool for educators in New Hampshire, and we are thrilled to see that the number of school districts participating in this work has doubled," said Frank Edelblut. "Math can be a challenging subject for some young students, and this work aims to help teachers further support their elementary students by addressing learning gaps, shifts in curriculum and foundational skills."

The Ongoing Assessment Project training was completed by 304 teachers during the summer of 2022, which included a total of 14 training sessions on mathematics instruction, learning, and formative assessment. Training focused on innovative practices and mathematics education research on how students understand mathematical concepts, common errors made and misconceptions that interfere with learning new concepts or solving problems.

The OGAP training was in-person and the teachers seemed to appreciate the way they could interact with each other and bounce ideas off each other as they went through the days of learning," said Mariane Gfroerer, director of advanced studies at NHLI.

School districts with the most participation included ConVal, Fall Mountain, Timberlane, Hollis-Brookline and Henniker & Weare Schools.

Despite a twenty year history of H-D students ranking well below state averages in both English and Math testing, the Superintendent's Office did not know of any H-D teachers attending this valuable training.

H-D High School closed because of outbreak of illnesses

Hillsboro-Deering High School canceled all after-school activities last Thursday and school Friday because of an outbreak of respiratory illnesses.

According to SAU #34 Superintendent Jennifer Crawford H-D is seeing a higher-than-usual rate of illnesses at all of their schools, particularly at the high school, where about 15% of the student body has been sick.

the high school, more than 50 have been out sick recently. The flu, strep throat, RSV, COVID-19 and the stomach bug have been going around the district. Crawford said the number of students that are sick is about double their typical rate, so they decided to close down for these next few days to give the building ventilation and to make sure everything gets cleaned.

She said there's also a significant number of staff members that have been sick as well.

"The threshold that we use to contact public health is we're at 15% of the student population," Crawford said. "And we also have a significant number of staff, and how many staff that you can have available for students' supervision is always part of decisions that get made." The district is asking parents to keep students home if they're presenting any symptoms. It is aiming to open back up on Monday.

NEC Board of Trustees elect first Hispanic President

The New England College (NEC) Board of Trustees elected Wayne F. Lesperance as the College's 16th President. Dr. Lesperance served as Interim President, succeeding Michele D. Perkins who was appointed NEC Chancellor last spring after serving as NEC President for 15 years.

"Dr. Lesperance arrived at NEC in 1999 to serve as Assistant Professor of Political Science, a role he relished for 17 years. In 2016, he transitioned to NEC's administration as Dean of Residential Undergraduate Programs. He served as Director of the Center for Civic Engagement, Vice President of Academic Affairs, Provost, and most recently Interim President.

NEC Board Chair Lex Scourby said that The Board of Trustees voted unanimously to accept the recommendation of its Presidential Search Committee, which had assessed Dr. Lesperance's accomplishments as Interim President. The Trustees noted that Dr. Lesperance was a particularly "good fit" as NEC President. He resides in Henniker, New Hampshire, with his wife, Stephanie; daughter, Grace; and their two dogs, Nero and Emmitt.

TAKE YOUR MED

A study published online in Communications Biology, a Nature journal has discovered how late-onset retinal degeneration can develop and a surprising potential therapeutic — metformin. . . .

Ambient temperature influences the results of some of the most used laboratory tests, and these distortions likely affect medical decision making, such as whether to prescribe medications, researchers report in the journal Med. The authors say that laboratories could statistically adjust for ambient temperature on test days when reporting lab results to account for day-to-day variability.

New research published in the journal Nature has shown the different ways that common medicines apparently affect gut bacteria. For example, the scientists also discovered that gastric acid medication, so-called proton pump inhibitors, are linked to adverse changes in the intestinal microbiome. In the colon of people who take gastric acid medication, they found relatively high levels of bacteria that are normally only present in the oral cavity. Stomach acid usually kills bacteria from the oral cavity that try to escape to the gut where they do not belong. But this is not the case when you use these gastric acid inhibitors. The observation is important because the presence of oral bacteria in the colon is associated with an increased risk of developing some types of colon cancer.

Remdesivir, when compared with standard of care for COVID-19, reduced the need for mechanical ventilation in hospitalized patients, according to a new randomized controlled trial published in CMAJ (Canadian Medical Association Journal). . . .

HOW CAN I KEEP MY AND GUMS HEALT

Dr. Esin Narli

It's important to take care of your teeth and gums, and not only to maintain an attractive smile. The following steps are key to keeping your teeth and gums healthy:

• Brush your teeth twice a day (with a fluoride toothpaste).

• Floss regularly to remove plague from between teeth. Or use a device such as a special brush or wooden or plastic pick recommended by a dental professional.

- Visit the dentist routinely for a check-up and professional cleaning.
- Don't smoke.

Can gum disease cause health problems beyond the mouth?

In some studies, researchers have observed that people with gum disease (when compared to people without gum disease) were more likely to develop heart disease or have difficulty controlling blood sugar. Other studies showed that women with gum disease were more likely than those with healthy gums to deliver preterm, low birth weight babies. But so far, it has not been determined whether gum disease is the cause of these conditions.

There may be other reasons people with gum disease sometimes develop additional health problems. For example, something else may be causing both the gum disease and the other condition, or it could be a coincidence that gum disease and other health problems are present together.

More research is needed to clarify whether gum disease actually causes health problems beyond the mouth, and whether treating gum disease can keep other health conditions from developing. In the meantime, it's a fact that controlling gum disease can save your teeth very good reason to take care of your teeth and gums.

New England College & Catholic Medical Center join to ease nursing shortage

A New Hampshire college and hospital are partnering to help train the next generation of nurses.

Catholic Medical Center is launching a three-year accelerated program with New England College that combines classroom learning with clinical experience.

Officials said they hope the program helps address the growing demand for well-trained nurses.

"This program was developed from a listening tour with area hospitals. What were the needs?" said Angela Smith, dean of nursing and health professions at New England College. "And what we learned was we need more bachelors-prepared nurses faster."

Students will earn 25% of their credits working as licensed nursing assistants at CMC.

The hospital said students will have a diverse clinical experience with rotations in the hospital setting, as well as outpatient clinics and community nursing locations.

Graduates will earn a bachelor of science degree in nursing. CMC said the graduates will be eligible to be hired and ready to provide care from day one.

Smith said there has been a longterm nursing shortage that became a crisis during the COVID-19 pandemic.

John Stark students participate in simulated Congressional Hearing

Thirteen John Stark Regional High School students in Dan Marcus's "We the People" class participated in a simulated congressional hearing in which they "testified" before a panel of judges acting as members of Congress on December.

The students demonstrated their knowledge and understanding of Constitutional Law principles while evaluating, taking, and defending positions on several relevant historical and contemporary issues. The John Stark team has advanced to the State Finals in January.

The top performing high school class earns the opportunity to attend the National Finals in Washington, D.C. representing NH.

To The Editor:

I'm appalled by the outrageous misleading headline of the Messenger's Publisher's Perspective December 2nd that our schools are promoting pornography. I find it unconscionable that someone is accusing the public school system of subverting and brainwashing our children. Previously, the editor gave credence to this crazy opinion by publishing this charge by an individual who also posted it on Facebook and now you seem to be siding with this misguided allegation.

We all know the editor's adversarial position toward the H-D School System but it is poor journalism to publish these allegations without investigating the article to determine what is factual and what is 100 % opinion. Only reporting one opinion, the person who is obviously a major proponent of censorship, has come across as xenophobic, anti LGBTQ and wants to prevent children from dealing with people and situations in the real world. There is no place for this kind of thinking in our public school system.

Apparently this individual has appointed herself as the Morality Police but she speaks only for a very small segment. She has two choices, she can opt out as she mentioned or if she's so dissatisfied, she can home school her kids. H-D is not the only system in the state of NH using the Sora App. It is obvious that this app has been selected to provide more resources for our students which would be impossible and more costly for the school libraries or the Town library to offer. Most students access books and media digitally instead of a hard copy texts. If this application is so dangerous, wouldn't the State be investigating these allegations against child pornography. This is just another example of misdirection and more alarmist attacks against local school boards, schools and teachers.

Barbara Cavanaugh, Deering

You are correct. It would be "poor journalism to print allegations without investigating them." That is precisely why I independently investigated them and obtained copies of some of this pornographic trash myself before editorializing on them. You are also correct that I am a frequent critic of the H-D School, which for 20 years has been ranked in the bottom tier by the Department of Education. You are quite wrong in labeling your neighbor as "a major proponent of censorship, and has come across as xenophobic, anti LGBTQ." Having read her letters and witnessed her testimony twice before the School Board, I found her to be very specific and factual. Never has she advocated banning books or offered a single negative LGBTQ sentiment. Her only point, and I wholly agree with her, is that titles with explicit sex and pornographic content should not be offered in our schools. LDB

Henniker Community School Teachers and Staff raise money for student DC trip

Teachers and staff at the Henniker Community School wanted to help all students attend the 8th grade trip to Washington, DC, in April, the first such trip planned since before the pandemic. In addition to the fundraising efforts of the students and parents of both the Henniker Community and the Weare Middle School for this year's combined school trip, HCS held a walk after school on November 28 to try to raise $1,000 to fully fund one scholarship for a Henniker student. Teachers and staff members participated in many ways-walking, finding sponsors, and donating. At the end of the event, they had raised $800.

Walk organizer and paraprofessional Sally Eldridge was determined to make her goal to raise enough cash to fully fund one student's trip. After getting the approval of Henniker Principal Matt Colby, staffers added a second day to the school's ongoing

TEN WAYS TO HEAT YOUR HOME SAFELY

If you live in a part of the country where it's cold and your heat is turned on, the American Red Cross offers ways to warm your home safely and avoid a fire in your residence.

The Red Cross responds to 27% more home fires in the period between November and March than in the warmer months. According to the National Fire Protection Association, home fires are most common in cooler months when people spend more time inside. Cooking and heating equipment are the leading causes of fires at families' residences. Here are ten steps to help heat your home safely:

- Have furnaces, chimneys, fireplaces, wood and coal stoves inspected and cleaned before another winter of use.
- If using a space heater, look for a model that shuts off automatically if the heater falls over. Place the heater on a level, hard and nonflammable surface in the home.
- Keep all potential sources of fuel like paper, clothing, bedding, curtains or rugs at least three feet away from space heaters, stoves or fireplaces.
- Portable heaters and fireplaces should never be left unattended. Turn off space heaters and make sure any embers in the fireplace are extinguished before going to bed or leaving home.
- Keep children and pets away from space heaters.
- Cut down on heating costs. Insulate the home by installing storm windows or covering the inside of windows with plastic to keep cold air out.
- Never use a cooking range or oven to heat your home.
- Keep fire in your fireplace by using a glass or metal fire screen large enough to catch sparks and rolling logs.
- Test batteries in smoke and carbon monoxide detectors.
- Develop a fire escape plan and practice it with everyone who lives in the home.
