$4,858,364.71 in restitution ordered

Former New London Financial Advisor must also pay $1 million in costs & penalties

The New Hampshire Bureau of Securities Regulation has entered a Consent Order with former investment adviser Thomas Chadwick of New London.

Chadwick, formerly of the investment adviser firm Chadwick & D'Amato, has been ordered to pay $4,858,364.71 in restitution to his former clients. He has also agreed to pay $1,000,000.00 in costs and penalties.

In 2021, the Bureau launched an investigation into Chadwick, whose clients were mostly older, conservative-to-moderate risk investors. During the investigation, the Bureau discovered that Chadwick invested most of his former clients' money in an extremely risky securities product known as "REML." REML contained warnings that it was not appropriate for "buy and hold" investors seeking long-term investments nor those who could not afford the risk of losing their entire investment in REML.

Despite these warnings, at the end of 2019 and beginning of 2020, Chadwick concentrated significant portions of his clients' accounts in REML, which fell to nearly zero dollars and resulted in devastating losses totaling several million dollars to dozens of Chadwick's former clients.

Along with the payment of restitution, cost, and penalties, Chadwick has agreed to be permanently barred from securities licensure in New Hampshire.

Doonesbury Cartoonist to deliver Commencement Address at New England College

Garry Trudeau, the Pulitzer Prize-winning cartoonist who created the Doonesbury comic strip, will receive an honorary doctorate degree from the College.

Famed cartoonist Garry Trudeau, creator of the Doonesbury comic strip, has been named the Commencement speaker for New England College's 2024 graduation ceremony on May 18. In addition, the New England College Board of Trustees has authorized the awarding of the Doctor of Humane Letters honoris causa to Trudeau in recognition of his achievements.

Trudeau's accomplishments include winning the 1975 Pulitzer Prize for Editorial Cartooning, making him the first, and only one of two, comic strip artists to win the award.

He then received the National Cartoonist Society's Newspaper Comic Strip Award in 1994 and Reuben Award in 1995. Trudeau's work has appeared in Harper's, Rolling Stone, The New Republic, The New Yorker, New York and The Washingon Post.

"Comic strips, and through them their creators, have long served as a mirror reflecting society and popular culture," stated Dr. Wayne F. Lesperance Jr., President of New England College. "I have no doubt that the class of 2024 will enjoy hearing Mr. Trudeau's perspective as they begin the next chapter of life." New England College will celebrate its 77th graduating class on Saturday, May 18, at 10:00 a.m. on the Simon Lawn in Henniker, New Hampshire.

Mark Fisk is new Bow High School principal

Assistant Principal Mark Fisk was named the next principal of Bow High School. He will take over for Brian O'Connell, who has been hired as the Superintendent. Marcy Kelley said Fisk's authenticity and people skills are what stood out most to the 19-person search committee that helped select him. "He is beloved by students and staff and he just quickly rose to the top." Prior to coming to Bow High in 2019, Fisk served as a social studies teacher and administrator at the New Hampton School. He started his teaching career at Concord High School.

Outside of his administrator duties, Fisk coaches Bow's unified soccer and basketball teams, which he said number some 30 students.

Fisk starts as principal on July 1. Meanwhile, the school district is in the process of filling his vice principal position.

WHITER TEETH

Q: How can I make my teeth whiter?

A: It's a reasonable desire to have the whitest, brightest smile possible. And there are many ways to achieve that dazzling smile. But the market is loaded with offers that claim to be able to give you that smile if only you would buy and use their miracle product! So, the first step to take in quest of the perfect smile is to talk with your dentist and find out about the legitimate products and treatments that are available.

For instance, whitening toothpastes that carry the American Dental Association (ADA) seal of acceptance have been tested and approved for what they claim to be. The ADA also approves of bleaching, which can be effective in some cases, although not all. For instance, if you have bonding or tooth-colored fillings placed in your front teeth, those materials will not whiten and may stand out.

If bleaching is an appropriate option for you, your dentist may do it for you in the office, or recommend to you an ADA-approved home-bleaching kit. In most cases, teeth that have yellowed will respond well to bleaching. Those that have gone brownish may not improve noticeably and those that have turned gray may not improve at all. In some cases, veneers or bonding may be the only way to substantially change the appearance of a tooth. As mentioned above, talk with your dentist about options right for you in pursuit of the best smile.

TAKE YOUR MEDICINE

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration has approved Jardiance (empagliflozin) and Synjardy (empagliflozin and metformin hydrochloride) as additions to diet and exercise to improve blood sugar control in children 10 years and older with type 2 diabetes. These approvals provide a new class of medicines taken by mouth to treat pediatric type 2 diabetes. Metformin, the only other oral therapy available for the treatment of children with type 2 diabetes, was first approved for pediatric use in 2000. Type 2 diabetes, the most common form of diabetes, is a chronic and progressive condition in which the body does not make or use insulin normally, leading to high levels of glucose (sugar) in the blood. The incidence of type 2 diabetes in children increased by 4.8% per year from 2002 to 2015 and is expected to continue increasing. As of 2017, there were approximately 28,000 cases of type 2 diabetes in children in the U.S. By 2060, if current trends continue, that number is predicted to be approximately 220,000, with the majority of cases occurring in minority racial and ethnic groups such as Non-Hispanic Blacks and Hispanics. Compared to adults, children with type 2 diabetes have limited treatment options, even though the disease and symptom onset generally progress more rapidly in children. Empagliflozin, the active ingredient in Jardiance and Synjardy, works by increasing the excretion of glucose in the urine. Synjardy also contains metformin.

Use of low-dose atropine eyedrops (concentration 0.01%) was no better than placebo at slowing myopia (nearsightedness) progression and elongation of the eye among children treated for two years, according to a randomized controlled trial published in JAMA Ophthalmology.

Hillsborough to get new Manahan Park dock in 2024, and new West Main Street sidewalks?

Hillsborough Town Administrator Laura Buono presented the Select Board with a quote from Tuckers Metal Fabrication for the replacement dock at Manahan Park. The Board reviewed the submission and approved the amount of $16,536 for the project.

Ms. Buono supplied the Board with the meeting notes from the most recent meeting on the Sidewalk Project, which took place on March 26th. Phone meetings are held every two weeks just between the project engineer, DOT, the Planning Director and Town Administrator. NEPA re-submission was scheduled for the week of March 26th, noting that the staff assigned to that task soon afterwards went on disability. The task will be reassigned to another staff member to complete. The Alteration of Terrain (AoT) permit was approved earlier in the morning. All known permits have been obtained for this project. Since the Alteration of Terrain permit was obtained last year, the engineer will check to confirm that it is effective for three years.

Towns study reclamation of Tri-Town Pit

The Francestown, Antrim and Bennington Select Boards have voted to continue exploring the reclamation process for the Tri-Town Pit, adjacent to the Bennington transfer station. The three towns have jointly managed the pit since 1993. Francestown Road Agent Gary Paige said he believed there was more than a million cubic yards of sand in the pit. Antrim's Interim Town Administrator Donna Hanson suggested the three towns convene a committee to start researching the process for environmental reclamation of the sand pit once the resources are exhausted. Jim Cleary, John Robertson of the Antrim Select Board, Francestown Select Board member Scott Heath and Bennington Select Board member Tony Parisi volunteered to serve on the committee. The agreement specifies that Antrim and Bennington each have a 40% share in the pit and Francestown has a 20% share, and that each town is responsible for their share in the cost of land reclamation.

Warner Select Board reviews process for appointments to boards & committees

At at recent meeting, the Warner Select Board engaged in a conversation on how to move forward with appointments and reappointments for various boards and committees. Michael Smith spoke about the benefits of serving on both the Planning Board and the Zoning Board. The Select Board discussed their responsibility of appointing individuals to various boards. Karen Coyne spoke to the benefit of sending all applicants information outlining the board members' responsibilities. Andy Bodnarik informed the Select Board that the Planning Board's handbook has been circulated by email and various training webinars. Beverley Howe questioned the need for the rules of behavior and the code of conduct. She expressed concern and spoke about the difficulty of getting people to serve. The Select Board discussed various questions to be included on the applicant questionnaire. Faith

Minton explained that she does not want the questionnaire to be viewed as a way of screening out applicants but rather an opportunity to educate. The Select Board discussed informing the applicants about opportunities available to serve on other boards.

The Select Board discussed reappointments. Coyne expressed concern about requiring individuals currently serving and who have a willingness to continue to be reinterviewed. Minton stated that she views it as an opportunity to have a conversation, build trust and show respect to the person seeking reappointment.

Minton advised the Select Board that New Hampshire Municipal legal advised that appointments and reappointments be treated the same. The Select Board agreed appointments and reappointments should be treated in the same manner.

Harry Seidel recapped:

- The Board agreed all applicants are treated the same.
- The process should be easy and as timely possible.
- Questionnaire to consist of a maximum of 6 questions to be returned to the Select Board as soon as possible.
- The Select Board will conduct in person interviews in multiple sessions tentatively May 2nd.

Guest Editorial

Thank God someone is looking out for the children

Children are facing an increasingly uphill battle. All the signals have been setting off alarm bells since 2010.

Commissioner Frank Edelblut

Jonathan Haidt, in his book "Anxious Generation," painstakingly lays out the case for alarm about the state of our children. These red flags include accelerating rates of major depression among teens, skyrocketing rates of anxiety and emergency room visits for self-harm or suicide rates. Abigail Shrier, in her book "Irreversible Damage," similarly weighs in on the transgender social contagion rampant among teen girls. This is on top of eroding academic performance since 2012. Beverly Perdue, National Assessment Governing Board chair and former North Carolina governor stated, "U.S. students are struggling across the board. Educators, policymakers, and families need to work together urgently and decisively to address this generation's learning needs."

With all of this going on, it is not surprising that educators and parents frequently reach out to the Department of Education to raise concerns. In almost all cases, when this outreach occurs, it is after the educators or parents have already attempted to address the situation at the local school level and experienced what they perceive as an inadequate response.

When the Department receives one of these concerns, it first reaches out to school leadership. It is important to validate the facts of a concern and then determine what, if any, action is appropriate.

In preparation for its articles, "How NH Education Commissioner Frank Edelblut used his office in the culture war" and "A trans teacher asked students about pronouns; then the education commissioner found out," NHPR contacted the Department with its own list of questions, which can be seen by following links at https://www.education.nh.gov. Please note, NPR has come under fire recently for its alleged bias that was reported in this Free Press article.

How should the Department respond when educators have reached out to express concern about diversity, equity and inclusion trainings that they are required to attend, believing they may be discriminatory? Or when educators have reached out believing that it was inappropriate for school counselors to encourage students to transition their gender without involving a parent? Or when a student teacher reports that their mentor teacher is drinking on the job and other educators turn a blind eye to the behavior? Or when, allegedly, an educator lies by calling in sick so they can take a student – without parental knowledge – to get an abortion. Should we turn a blind eye?

How should the Department respond when a parent has reached out to express concern that a teacher had called a student a "White supremacist" and confiscated their Trump flag while ignoring the student wearing the Pride flag? Or when a parent raises concern about depictions of oral and anal sex in a school text. Or when a teacher, in a unit study on World War II, inserts a reading list of "LGBTQ Books You Need to Read." Or when an art teacher, rather than teaching art, introduces children to Black Lives Matter and LGBTQ for Kids, without consulting with parents or school leadership. Should we look the other way?

What is missing from the NHPR list of questions is a lack of curiosity for the educators and students who have raised concerns about these circumstances in their schools. The articles go to great lengths to explore the feelings of educators that the Department has reached out to, but seems short on perspectives of the educators, students and parents who initially raised concerns to the Department.

In education, we serve students and families. Educational leaders serve this constituency and their community and the educators in their system. All of us in the public sector serve the taxpayer.

Service to these constituencies means that we are responsive to them. It means that when they raise concerns, we listen to them, carefully consider the feedback and act appropriately. When a constituent complaint reaches the Department, it is almost universally because the individual did not feel heard when they tried to resolve the situation locally. Rather than view it as an intrusion into their world when the Department reaches out, school leaders should view it as feedback. Educational leaders should be able to reflect and determine if that feedback means that they should modify their approach or not.

Great organizations and good leaders thrive on feedback. I see the NHPR articles as feedback for me and the Department.

It reinforces to me that, in all of our endeavors, we should continuously be thinking about the children. In Africa there is an Indian Tribe, Masai, with a traditional greeting, "Kasserian Ingera." This greeting translates to, "How are the children?" It denotes that life is good when the children are well and protected, therefore placing the highest value on children and their well-being.

When I assumed this role in 2017, I committed to being 100% focused on the children. Thank God someone is looking out for the children.

Greenfield moving forward with alternatives to Eversource

Greenfield's Community Power Committee voted to move forward with the process of identifying potential power suppliers at their March 12 meeting.

At the March 12 Town Meeting, Greenfield voters approved community power, enabling the town to negotiate aggregate electric rates for Greenfield customers currently served by Eversource, with the possibility of increased power from renewable sources. Both residential customers and small businesses are eligible to take part in community power. While Greenfield residents would be automatically enrolled in community power, households can opt out at any time with no penalty.

A new civics curriculum for New Hampshire schools

Fulfilling objectives of the Commission on New Hampshire Civics

In an effort to bolster civics education throughout the Granite State, the New Hampshire Department of Education (NHED) is partnering with Discovery Education to support the development of informed students who are eager and ready to participate in democracy.

In March, the Governor and Executive Council approved a $1 million contract between the New Hampshire Department of Education and Discovery Education to provide high quality curriculum and instructional materials for New Hampshire students and teachers to help them explore the history, heritage and principles of the New Hampshire Constitution and government it established.

In 2021, the New Hampshire Department of Education made Discovery Education content available, at no cost, to all New Hampshire educators when it selected the Discovery Education Experience learning platform to support local learning environments with high quality instructional material.

Through this initial partnership, 100% of New Hampshire schools can use the Discovery platform and have engaged more than 1.4 million learning experiences. Expanding on that partnership, the new civics curriculum will be organized within a custom New Hampshire Civics Channel on the Discovery Education platform that will roll out to educators this fall.

To support the implementation of this resource and to help drive the return on the State's edtech investment, this new phase of partnership will also include comprehensive teacher training for the effective use of the resources.

"Civics education is essential for all New Hampshire students to ensure that this future generation of adults can, with respect for others, both make their voices heard and understand alternative perspectives," said Frank Edelblut, education commissioner.

"These skills are enhanced with a foundational understanding of the origins of our government and the framework established by our Constitution. We are pleased to once again partner with Discovery Education to help educators throughout the state find innovative ways to teach civics."

Discovery Education will create a digital textbook and related content supporting the optional civics curriculum. Featuring resources for grades K-12, the materials created by Discovery Education will include ready-to-use resources that can easily be integrated into instruction; New Hampshire-centric digital assets featuring state specific artifacts; primary source documents that help develop each student's understanding of their state government and constitution; and other custom created videos, interactives and educational supports that help frame engaging critical civics questions for all learners.

"Discovery Education is honored to be selected to support this incredibly important work and continue our support of New Hampshire educators, students and families," said Coni Rechner, Discovery Education's Senior Vice President of State and Strategic Partnerships. "The New Hampshire Department of Education's innovative approach to civics instruction places it among the leaders in the effort to create active, well-informed citizens prepared to participate in democracy, and we are excited to continue to collaborate with N.H. Commissioner Edelblut and his entire team on this new initiative."

National Drug Take Back Day was very successful

More than 100 police departments in New Hampshire participated in "National Drug Take Back Day" on Saturday, April 27.

From 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., Granite Staters discarded unwanted and unused drugs at dozens of drop-off locations across the state. The collected drugs ranged from Percocet and oxycodone to expired blood pressure medications.

After collecting the drugs, police then handed off the drugs to the United States Drug Enforcement Administration for safe destruction.

Since the tradition began in 1998, the DEA said they have collected nearly 18 million pounds of unwanted and unused drugs.

Colby-Sawyer College President stepping down on June 30

Susan D. Stuebner

Colby-Sawyer
College President,
Professor of Business and Social Sciences and Volanakis Family
Presidential Chair
Susan D. Stuebner recently announced that she will step down on June 30, 2024, after eight years
in office.

Stuebner, who assumed the presidency in July 2016 following the unanimous appointment of the Colby-Sawyer Board of Trustees, will become the 21st president of Marietta College, a private, liberal arts institution in Marietta, Ohio.

As Colby-Sawyer's ninth president, Stuebner provided leadership that positioned the college to respond to a challenging landscape in higher education. During her tenure, Colby-Sawyer strengthened its offerings in nursing and health sciences, established a formal partnership with Dartmouth Health and increased the college's graduate and professional studies programs from one to 11, with a total enrollment exceeding 250 students.

Stuebner saw great success as a fundraiser for the institution. Under her leadership, the college's endowment doubled, growing from $36 million in 2016 to $72 million in March 2024.

Colby-Sawyer also achieved two of its highest fundraising years in its history, each totaling more than $20 million. In addition, the college generated $19 million in donations to fully fund the construction of its newest building, the Janet Udall Schaefer '52 Center for Health Sciences, a state-of-the-art facility slated to open in the fall.

Stuebner also led the institution through a tuition reset, lowering the college's listed tuition price by 60 percent to increase accessibility and transparency for prospective students and families. This innovative restructuring of the college's tuition and financial aid offerings garnered national media attention, with Colby-Sawyer the focus of interviews by The New York Times and The Washington Post, among other outlets.

"Sue has led the college through a tumultuous time in higher education," Chair of the Colby-Sawyer Board of Trustees Lisa Hogarty '81 said.

"Nothing more exemplifies her leadership skills than how she deftly navigated the institution through a global pandemic. She worked closely with the board, senior administrators, and the faculty to build a strategic plan for the college that we continue to execute. She has also been a prolific fundraiser, exceeding target after target, including her efforts to double the endowment during her tenure. On behalf of the trustees, I extend my sincerest gratitude to Sue for her leadership as president. We will miss her dearly and wish her continued success in this next stage of her journey."

Stuebner's professional passion has long focused on the sustainability of regional, private colleges. Prior to joining Colby-Sawyer, she served as executive vice president for Allegheny College in Meadville, Pennsylvania, following a 10-year tenure as vice president for administration and planning at Lycoming College in Williamsport, Pennsylvania.

Hogarty and the Colby-Sawyer College Board of Trustees will meet this week for their scheduled May meetings and will develop a process for a national search for the college's next president.

The board will also discuss plans to name an interim president for the 2024-25 academic year and will announce that appointment shortly

NH Most Wanted Fugitive Aaron Butler arrested in Goshen

Aaron Butler

The U.S. Marshals Service - NH Joint Fugitive Task Force, in conjunction with Newport Police Department and the Sullivan County Sheriff's Office, are pleased to announce the capture of "NH Most Wanted" fugitive Aaron Butler, who was taken into custody Tuesday in Goshen. The arrest signals the end of a seventeen-month hunt that included Butler being featured as the "Fugitive of the Week" in December 2022, which was distributed throughout the New Hampshire media and law enforcement networks. Butler, 34, was wanted on state arrest warrants charging the unlawful sale of cocaine, fentanyl, and methamphetamine, as well as felon in possession of a firearm, and armed career criminal.

These charges triggered a U.S. District Court arrest warrant for Butler, who was placed on federal supervised release due to a drug trafficking conviction in 2019, and his continued criminal activity violated the conditions of release set forth by the government.

Although Butler will have to answer for his failures to comply with federal supervision, his legal troubles may not end there, as a Newport Police investigation into the state charges is ongoing.

After key intelligence gathered by the Newport PD and Sullivan County Sheriff's Office led the U.S. Marshals JFTF members to surround a residence just a mile South of the Goshen Town Offices, Butler was caught fleeing out the rear of the residence when the arrest team knocked and announced their presence. Subsequently, the residence was cleared of safety hazards by the U.S. Marshals and handed over to Newport Detectives who executed a search warrant.

Elevated mold count found at Bow's Community Building

On April 18, 2024, the Community Building was tested for the potential presence of mold. Four Brothers Environmental performed several tests throughout the building and these tests consisted of air sampling as well as a visual inspection throughout the building.

The testing results were received on April 22, 2024. The results indicate that there is an elevated mold count in the basement, as well as in the exercise equipment storage room. Portable air filtration units were placed in the occupied spaces of the building. The Town is making arrangements at this time with an environmental mitigation firm to conduct a full cleaning and decontamination of the two areas. In the meantime, the exercise equipment storage room may not be used until the cleanup and decontamination has been completed, and the basement area is also off-limits until that time. If any individual member of the public has any personal medical concerns, it is recommended that you contact your primary care physician. Additional information on mold and its possible effects may be found on the CDC website: www.cdc. gov/mold/

The Town has contracted with Alpine Environmental to perform the cleanup and disinfection of the basement and equipment storage room. The work was scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday, May 1 and May 2. The building was closed for the day on Thursday, May 2.
